To celebrate its tenth anniversary and show its commitment to translator education, Kilgray Translation Technologies has organized a student essay contest.

The topic for the essay is “The future of translation technology”. Participants should write on improving translation technology by developing unique features, perfecting current weaknesses or taking the industry to a whole new direction.

It is a great opportunity for your students to imagine the future of translation technology that helps translators to deliver consistent quality translations faster than at any time in the history.

In addition to the prizes the winners can also enhance the reputation of their school. You can find the details on this page:
